Case Study: Coláiste Rís, Dundalk, Co. Louth

Coláiste Rís is a co-educational secondary school in Dundalk, Co. Louth with over 500 students. In recent years the school has expanded and modernised their facilities.

Customer requirements:

In 2012 Coláiste Rís approached K.T. Communications with the view of installing a suitable video conferencing system which would allow for visual and audio communications between two locations.

The main requirements which Coláiste Rís had were as follows:

1. Two screens in ground floor classroom. One to show live video and audio of the teacher in the classroom above. The second screen will show data from the teacher's computer in the classroom above.

LifeSize Video Conferencing system

LifeSize Video Conferencing enables anyone with dispersed colleagues and operations to collaborate clearly and effectively through the use of HD monitors and cameras.

Educators are frequently tasked with making their curriculum more engaging, but often have limited resources to do so. Video conferencing solutions from LifeSize enable educators to enhance their curricula without straining resources. Imagine a class enriched through the addition of virtual field trips, collaboration exercises with remote classrooms and accessibility to subject-matter experts located around the globe. From visiting world-renowned museums to hearing about the stars from the astronauts who have seen them up close, LifeSize facilitates interactive learning experiences through the power of HD

The result

The system installed by K.T. Communications has not only served Coláiste Rís with their initial requirements but will allow this forward-thinking school to connect their students with schools and organisations worldwide. The video conferencing system installed provides their students with a learning environment like no other.
